Mr. COWAN did not believe the bill would accomplish what its author desired. He thought an amendment to the constitution was the only way to reach the matter, and he he believed such an amendment would pass in Congress in less than a month. Mr. WILSON referred to certain laws passed in Southern States since the abolition of slavery, which he said subjected the freedimen to a worse bouldage than slavery itself. The condition of the freedimen of the South was worse to day than it was on the day of Loe's surrender.

Mr. SHERMAN sympathized with the abjects of the bill. He believed it to be the duty of Congress to secure freedom to the suid, under the second section of the amendment, to make provision for the free dom of the Constitution under which it could be done, that section which gives to the citizens of the several States.

The Morning Post states that Stephens has arrived in Paris.

In the Court of Queen's Beach the trial of Captain Corbett on the charge of selling the Stenandonh to the rebels, and enlisting mens of one State all the rights of citizens of the saveral States.

The bill before the Senate did not define the civil riguil Thien like negroes ought to have, but stated them in general fertin. In his judgment, Congress ought to impose the conditions upon which the Southern States should be received back into the Union, and they ought to be in the form of amend, ments to the Constitution. Action on the bill before the Setlate ought to be deferred until after the reported the Committee of Fifteen, provided for by the concurrent resolution passed yesterday.
